Jackie Scott and the Housewreckers Kick off Eighth Year of Hampton History Museum Music Series on Jan. 15

Jackie Scott and the Housewreckers return to the Hampton History Museum to kick off the eighth year of the Front Porch Music Series on Wednesday, January 15, 6-8 pm. Scott and her band were the first musicians to play the series when it was launched in January 2013.

Jackie Scott & The Housewreckers have local roots that make Hampton Roads home. Coming from varied backgrounds and influences makes for a hot combination of blues and R&B packed with soul when you encounter and fall under the power of Jackie Scott & The Housewreckers.

The Housewreckers are: Mark Hopkins, guitar; David Holland, bass; Ivan Evans, percussion; and Chuck Williams, saxophone. They will be joined by special guest William “Mobetta” Ledbetter on bass, guitar and harmonica.

Scott has spent years honing her craft as a vocalist and her quest lead her to the steamy windows of Chicago's blues scene. It was in Chicago that Scott received her baptism into the blues. Musicians and performers, great and small, all freely shared in their wealth of skill, time and talent to help her grow as a blues entertainer. Nellie Travis, Chicago blues woman and Westside bluesman and Howlin' Wolf sidekick, Eddie Shaw, played a major part in mentoring her into the blues Chicago style.

Jackie Scott & The Housewreckers have opened for BB King, Keb Mo, Taj Mahal, Lyle Lovett and others.
